PCC Reflects on Productive Year, Looks Ahead to 2023 Program

We are writing to convey our gratitude for all that you do. The PCC team had an impactful year in 2022, in large part because of your contributions. We worked with an outstanding cohort of research fellows, taught a research sprint with the Harvard Berkman Klein Center, worked closely with Mondragon University for 7 months, managed a consequential large conference in Rio de Janeiro, and advised new platform co-ops, including a group of 200 African entrepreneurs and Iran's first platform co-op. Collectively, we turned the PCC Circle of Cooperators into the PCC Solidarity Collaboratory, a democratic organization.

In 2023, we will launch a pop-up incubator for ideas and practice, a 22-event program from January 25 to July 17, with 42 committed partner organizations from 24 countries. We'll share more about that this Platform Co-op School shortly.

The program will include one-day courses for the first time, as well as symposia, seminars, and community assemblies.

We hope that you will consider enrolling in our first one-day business course on Saturday, February 18, with Erik Forman, co-founder of Drivers Cooperative and Greg Brodsky of Start.coop. Sign up here.

Beyond this, we'll be working with ITS Rio de Janeiro on a research grant about

Our program for the next year is designed to foster collaboration. Whether you are a researcher, technologist, policymaker, or platform co-op founder, please reach out to us if you share our purpose of strengthening the digital cooperative economy. We wish you a happy and healthy new year.
